One NZ Satellite is already helping Kiwi stay better connected in some of Aotearoa's most remote places. Now, it's helping in another, slightly more unexpected way. Working with the Department of Conservation, we recently started rolling out satellite-enabled sensors in remote hut toilets. Powered by One NZ Satellite, these sensors monitor wastewater levels in real time, so the DOC rangers know when servicing is needed - saving them time, fuel, and emissions from unnecessary trips. DOC is predicting up to $180,000 in annual savings thanks to the sensors, which is amazing!
